Two-column reading-order sample - 1

Alpha

Alpha records an independent observation. Read the entire left column before entering the right column. The paragraph keeps the reference [2].

Beta

Beta records an independent observation. Read the entire left column before entering the right column. The paragraph keeps the reference [2].

Gamma

Gamma records an independent observation. Read the entire left column before entering the right column. The paragraph keeps the reference [2].

Delta

Delta records an independent observation. Read the entire left column before entering the right column. The paragraph keeps the reference [2].

Two-column reading-order sample - 2

Epsilon

Epsilon records an independent observation. Read the entire left column before entering the right column. The paragraph keeps the reference [2].

Zeta

Zeta records an independent observation. Read the entire left column before entering the right column. The paragraph keeps the reference [2].

Eta

Eta records an independent observation. Read the entire left column before entering the right column. The paragraph keeps the reference [2].

Theta

Theta records an independent observation. Read the entire left column before entering the right column. The paragraph keeps the reference [2].